It is the "building block" of programming and allows all learners to think creatively, think critically, and collaborate with others. Its block-based coding uses a drag-and-drop learning environment, where programmers use coding instruction "blocks" to construct animated stories and games.

In this course, you will work through 6 projects with your instructor. As you progress through the projects, you will be challenged to design your own sprites and backdrops, allowing you to personalize your games the way you want to and show them off to the world!
